THE FILM

STORY / SYNOPSIS

The story follows Rebecca, a young ceramic artist who falls into a coma after a serious car accident in Paris. As doctors fight to keep her alive, the physical world begins to dissolve around her. Suspended between life and death, Rebecca's consciousness drifts into a space between existence and nothingness.

On this inner journey, she relives real memories from her past while confronting the present and the possibilities of imagined futures that were never lived.

The film's narrative is built upon Albert Einstein's famous scientific proposition that the distinction between past, present and future is merely a stubbornly persistent illusion.

Through visual poetry and a non-linear narrative structure, Peter Korday's direction brings this inner, transcendent pilgrimage to the screen.

THE FILM

DIRECTOR / VISION

Peter Korday is a Paris-based French-Hungarian director. He is the Co-founder and CEO of Gold Wood Pictures. He began his career as a musical theatre director, primarily directing musicals and operas. He has worked in Los Angeles, New York, Italy, Canada, Germany, Sweden and Japan.

Following several years of an international theatre career, he increasingly turned towards film directing in Paris, where he began to further develop the visual and dramaturgical approach he had formed in theatre through a new cinematic language.

Soft Floating in the Fields of Spheres is rooted in the traditions of French art cinema, while as a director he consciously sought to create a distinctive and unique cinematic language.

His artistic credo:

"Like Fellini dreaming through Truffaut's lens in a Tarkovskian silence."

THE ARTIST

KRISTINA LORENT

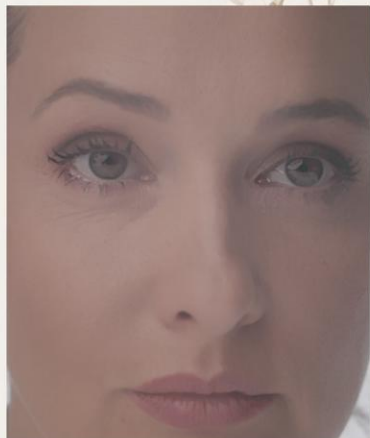

REBECCA

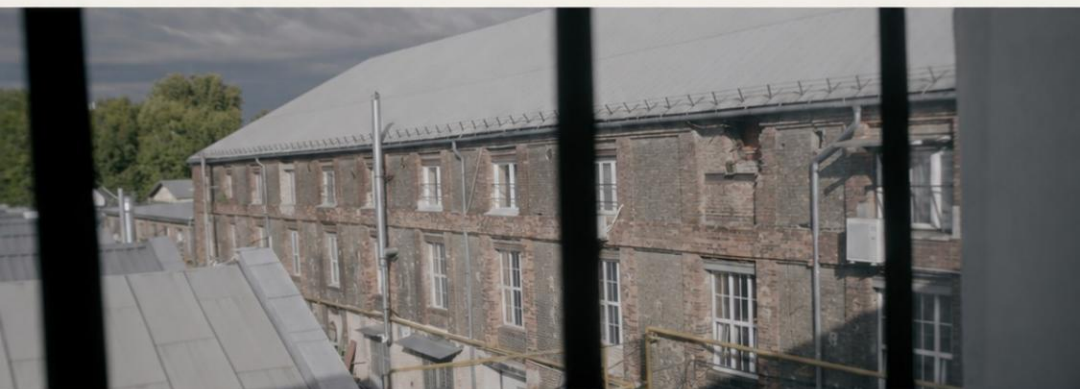

Kristina Lorent is a Paris-based French-Hungarian actress, Founder and President of Gold Wood Pictures. She began her career in Los Angeles, where she studied screen acting under renowned masters and worked on film productions.

Throughout her career, she has worked alongside Hollywood stars such as Jason Clarke, Rosamund Pike and Kristanna Loken. Her work spans both the American and European film worlds, with Paris currently serving as her creative base.

The Budapest Reporter described her as a “unique figure bridging Hollywood and European art cinema.” In 2026, the Los Angeles-based Authority Magazine featured her international film career as part of its Inspirational Women in Hollywood series.
